

Conflicts of Interest
January 2015

I am of counsel at Boies, Schiller, & Flexner. Over the two years, I have worked with lawyers at that firm on behalf of Barclays, which has been sued by various plaintiffs who allege that it manipulated LIBOR, the plaintiff in Starr International v. United States, and the plaintiff in Erica P. John Fund v. Halliburton.

I write a biweekly column for Slate, which pays me a nominal sum.

I cofounded a startup called Collective Decision Engines, which seeks to commercialize quadratic voting.
